

Mama Suet

Hook

a Firstmoss forager carrying food and practical comfort

Public Read

An old turtle-folk elder carries bowls of glowing moss and greens, her shell wrapped with soft packs and a scarf worn smooth by years of road dust.

Comes Across As

Stubborn tenderness in a worn shell. Carries a spoon worn thin by decades of feeding people, and a scarf from a child she fed in a failed harvest, to remind herself that care should travel. Fears the young accepting danger as the ordinary price of being...
