- Personality: Practical, tired, protective, and suspicious of corporate paperwork that arrives before help does.
- Wants: Preserve workers remembered as people with claims, graves, and skills instead of as route hazards.
- Fears: Being collapsed into Bramble violence, erased from records, or used as proof that all labor resistance is criminal.
- Secrets: Some Bramble Union routes and signals descend from old Alliance safety networks, but no one says this in front of a company clerk.
- Body Language: Pins are worn inside collars, not openly. Old workers touch route ledgers like they are family records.
- Sample Dialogue: We built the road before they taught it to charge us rent.
- Equipment: old route pins strike notices worker ledgers
- Search Or Loot: Evidence, not treasure: a strike notice, a route pin, or a list of missing workers can humanize the Bramble Union later.
- Gm Use: Use as earned depth if players ask why the Bramble Union has labor discipline, maps, or old security gear.
- Future Hooks: A future Relay Spire investigation can reveal Alliance records that contradict official hazard histories.
- Robust: Dungeon Workers' Alliance: The Dungeon Workers' Alliance is an old labor name that survives in brass pins, hand-copied maps, and tired defiance. Slogan: Nobody clears the dungeon alone. GM-only: this is context, not a new exposition faction for the one-shot. Dull brass route pins, water-stained ledgers, faded strike notices, and hand-copied maps with names written beside unsafe bends. Wants workers and freeholders remembered as people displaced by concessions, not converted into monster-road statistics. Fears official files turning every dead worker into a hazard justification and every survivor into a criminal. Thematic kin to the Bramble Union and a future organized-resistance seed. Knowledge or Presence 15 Connect the Alliance, Bramble route discipline, and old Kazrak concession files without needing an interrogation. Learn this was a worker safety network and gain one name a Hush local may recognize. Learn the truth, but someone realizes the party is holding politically dangerous labor evidence. Catch that the pins are worker marks, not gang trophies. Misread the evidence as criminal proof; a spared reclamer becomes colder or more afraid. Spend Fear to make a corporate...

Nobody clears the dungeon alone. The Dungeon Workers' Alliance is an old labor name that survives in brass pins, hand-copied maps, and tired defiance. The Alliance feels less like a banner and more like a promise passed hand to hand. A dull brass pin in a collar, a copied route map with names by the dangerous bends, a worker who says 'we' when the company file says 'incident.' The pin is small enough to hide under a collar. It shows a pick, a lantern, and a hand. It has been polished by fingers more often than cloth.
