A hot spring lake that points toward buried divine industry and gives Sablewood a heat source older than any concession. Ember Lake steams under cool canopy air, a hot spring mirror that suggests something older is still working below Sablewood. Ember Lake is a quiet contradiction: water glowing like banked coals, warm shallows, black stones, steam curls, and boats that look too small for the light beneath them. The place breaks into usable table spaces: Warm shallows: The lake glows under clear water. Black-stone shore: Dark rocks hold heat after sunset. Boat landing: Small boats and heat charms mark practical use. Plants and materials: steam reeds, ember algae, black-shore moss. Animals and background life: warm-water fish, ember flies, shore lizards, night birds hunting over steam. The air carries heat shimmer over water, coal-red glow, steam curls, warm stones. Warm vents feed algae, algae feed fish, fish draw birds, and locals read lake heat like weather...
