- Personality: Calm as a survival skill. Wears each misfiled form as a dangling medallion, penance kept where supervisors can see it. Wants to climb high enough that mistakes stop landing on this particular neck.
- Wants: Get the custody line signed without being blamed for what the line means.
- Fears: A missing stamp, a superior's red-ink note, and being made the example.
- Secrets: They know some forms are designed to move responsibility away from the powerful, not toward truth.
- Body Language: Give it one tactile detail when introduced. Connect it to a choice, clue, or consequence.
- Sample Dialogue: If you would sign here, custody becomes officially yours. I only process the line. I do not write what it costs. Please. A missing stamp falls on me, not on them.
