The Midnight Cabal is a rumor with a lockpick smile, present only in whispers and impossible coincidences. Nobody reliable claims to have hired the Midnight Cabal. That is part of the brand, if it is a brand. The stories always include one locked door, one unpaid debt, and one witness who insists the candle blew out by itself. The name is spoken the way people speak about a storm they hope will miss them. Quietly, with one glance toward the nearest door. The Midnight Cabal Midnight Cabal the midnight job A whispered name for impossible jobs and doors that opened without permission. GM-only seed: myth-armored operators in gaps the corporations cannot fully price. Future thread only; a rumor, not a staged one-shot faction. Unknown; useful as rumor pressure only. useful pieces: the Cabal is only rumor in this one-shot, the rumor scares institutions, and one impossible detail may be true. Learn the safest version: a name whispered around locked doors and missing papers. Learn the rumor, but someone nearby decides you are interested in forbidden work. You cannot confirm them, but you know the name is treated as dangerous. You repeat the rumor in front of the wrong listener. Spend Fear to put a wrong-side wax seal or open lock into a later future-hook scene. Rogue or Slyborne PCs hear the craft hidden under the myth. Loreborne PCs know no reliable source agrees on whether the Cabal...
