The Umbrand Consortium A rumor about goods that arrive after official supply says they cannot. If you needed it, it was never legal. The Umbrand Consortium is the rumor of a crate that arrives after the market says survival is out of stock.
Umbrand stories smell like wet rope, unmarked wood, and favors nobody wants written down. They are not glamorous smugglers. They are the answer to a locked pantry, a restricted medicine shelf, and a village told to wait for authorized mercy. Someone mentions an unmarked crate that reached a house after the official supply route closed. Nobody says thank you loudly. Nobody asks who carried it. The Umbrand Consortium Umbrand the necessity smugglers A rumor about goods that arrive after official supply says they cannot. GM-only seed: smuggle restricted necessities through markets that made need illegal. Future thread only; at most a black-market rumor. Unknown; do not turn rumor into a contact in this pass. Usefulness, but...

- Robust: A rumor about goods that arrive after official supply says they cannot. GM-only future seed: leave Umbrand unresolved unless Kyle opens the scarcity-market arc at the table. Wet rope, unmarked crates, cold coins, rain-dark cloth, sanded-off brands, and quiet gratitude. Move necessities through the gaps official markets create, while staying unconfirmed enough to survive. Exposure, moral theater, Zephra access control, and desperate people naming the route that saved them. Future thread only; at most a black-market rumor. Knowledge / Instinct / Presence 15 Understand the rumor as necessity smuggling: mercy moving like contraband because official access failed. Learn what kind of goods appear in Umbrand stories: medicine, food, charms, and things villages were told to wait for. Learn the rumor, but someone asks whether the party is buying, reporting, or begging. You miss the organization but see the need that would create it. You mistake a survival route for a villain's market and burn a fragile contact. Spend Fear to show Zephra's locked gate and the other door people invented. Community-linked PCs recognize the shame of needing quiet help. Merchant or logistics PCs read the...
