

ACT-THREE - Act Three: Seeking a Custodian

Player text

The road softens. The trees do not change, but the air does: warmer, kinder, like a held breath finally letting go. Ahead, lantern-light and music gather around ordinary people who feel safe. Somewhere in this village is the person you were sent to find. All you have to do now is hand off the package and collect your pay. Simple.

Public objective

Reach the village, find the person who can receive the package, and deliver it.

- Title: Act Three: Seeking a Custodian
- Shorttitle: Act Three
- Order: 400
- Playersafe: True
- Completioneligible: False
- Caption: Hush turns the package from cargo into a community question.
- Mood: table transition
- Gmgoal: Shift from road peril to a warm village sanctuary, then let the contrast carry unease. Establish the job plainly: reach Hush, find the person who keeps it safe, and deliver the package.
- Publicobjective: Reach the village, find the person who can receive the package, and deliver it.
- Readaloud: The road softens. The trees do not change, but the air does: warmer, kinder, like a held breath finally letting go. Ahead, lantern-light and music gather around ordinary people who feel safe. Somewhere in this village is the person you were sent to find. All you have to do now is hand off the package and collect your pay. Simple.
- Gmnotes: High mercy from earlier acts starts Hush warmer. Slaughter or extraction starts Hush polite but cooler. If package_status is lost, this act can still play as arrival and social discovery, but the handoff branch is blocked until Kyle confirms the recovery path.
- Playertakeaway: You have reached the safe place; the job is nearly done, but the village is worth noticing before you rush through it.
- Storytakeaway: Hush is the haven the delivery exists to serve, and its safety is deliberate rather than accidental.
- Mechanictakeaway: Act 3 runs on social and exploration mechanics: Presence for trust, Instinct for unease, Knowledge for ward and infrastructure clues.
- Livetools: none

- Gmscript: Say: "The road pressure eases here. Let yourselves feel the relief. This village is safe on purpose, someone keeps it that way, and that is who you are here to find."
- Gmreadaloud: The road softens. Lantern-light and music gather around ordinary people who feel safe. Somewhere in this village is the person you were sent to find.
- Gmchecklist: Read Act 1/2 carry-in before the first Hush scene. Say the goal as person-first: the person who keeps this place safe. Keep Hush warm; the corporate lens is the unease, not the village itself. Say the package, never Keystone Asset, on player-facing surfaces.
- Gmprivate: GM-only seed: Hush's safety is the ward, the package renews it, and the cost belongs to the larger corporate soul-economy scheme. Seed with objects and reactions; do not explain. Canon flags remain locked: Hush corporate framing, ward pacing, Atlas-original locations, and package_status=lost resolution.

- Takeawayhelp: Player takeaway You have reached the safe place; the job is nearly done, but the village is worth noticing before you rush through it. "You are close to payday. Enjoy the warmth, and notice what your character cannot help noticing." "You can head for the music, ask a friendly local who keeps the village safe, check the package, or simply describe how relief lands on your character." Act 3 starts with playable relief: talk, ask, notice, breathe, then move toward the person who receives the package. presence instinct knowledge table-spotlight Story takeaway Hush is the haven the delivery exists to serve, and its safety is deliberate rather than accidental. "This place is safe on purpose. Someone keeps it that way. That is who you are here to find." "Locals call the protection the ward. They trust it, even when they do not know everything about it." Do not explain the ward economy. The story detail players can hold is simple: Hush is protected, and protection requires a person. presence instinct knowledge table-spotlight Mechanic takeaway Act 3 runs on social and exploration mechanics: Presence for trust, Instinct for unease, Knowledge for ward and infrastructure clues.
