The Emeris Capital Gate is a bright western threshold of pale carved stone, toll counters, route-charms, fried dough, caravan noise, and the green mouth of Sablewood beyond the road. Make the starting city concrete without inventing a missing ward problem here. Pale carved stone arches over three wagon lanes. A permanent gate market clings to the wall where the city becomes road. The gate sells confidence, supplies, and paperwork before the forest gets a vote. Distant beacon-pulses, stone vibration, notices snapping in wind, and a low hum that arrives late. Fried dough, hot sealing-wax, brass polish, carriage dust, and rain waiting in the forest air. The arch is cool under the hand; the road stones grow damp and moss-flecked toward Sablewood. People...
