The path ahead begins to glow in thin lines through earth and bark, all converging toward the Open Vale. Use this as the Act 4 to Act 5 forward edge, gated on commitment and ritual_prep. Thin lines run through stone, root, and soil toward the ritual center. Dust lifts from them when the Keystone is near. Some lines are bright where people gather; others are dim near neglected edges. Ward-light ticks in grooves, wind thins near the center, and voices come back as if the clearing is measuring them. Ozone, old chalk, wet stone, and a faint sweetness like crushed clover under lightning. The grooves feel smooth in the center and sharp where the ward has cracked. Animals keep to the edge. The place feels operational and old, not abandoned. Thin lines run through stone, root, and soil toward the...
