The Latch feels like a threshold that decides whether access is earned, bought, or refused. The Latch feels like a threshold that decides whether access is earned, bought, or refused. Make entry feel chosen by people, not granted by map travel. A gate, narrow pass, or settlement edge is reinforced with practical repairs rather than show. Marks show where people wait before being invited through. The real lock is social: who vouches, who listens, and who arrives with trouble. Leaf-drip, insects, distant wingbeats, and animal calls that stop or resume according to pressure, not comfort. Wet iron, woodsmoke, packed dirt, and old rope. The latch itself is hand-worn, heavy, and warmer than the metal around it. The forest is populated even when no NPC is present; silence, birds, insects, and tracks are actionable signals. A gate, narrow pass, or settlement edge is reinforced with practical repairs rather than show. Marks show where people wait before being invited through. The real lock is social: who...
