

NPC / Community Trust Track

What it is

A module-facing tracker for rapport with a person or settlement.

How it works

Use when repeated choices change how warm, candid, generous, or guarded an NPC/community becomes.

Step by step

- Use when repeated choices change how warm, candid, generous, or guarded an NPC/community becomes.
- High trust makes help warmer and clearer. Low trust still lets play continue, but with distance, fewer gifts, or harder social positioning.
- Return to the fiction with the concrete result, cost, or benefit.

- Summary: A module-facing tracker for rapport with a person or settlement.
- When: Use when repeated choices change how warm, candid, generous, or guarded an NPC/community becomes.
- Not When: Do not make trust the only route to required information; low trust changes tone, cost, and available help.
- Question: How does trust change play?
- Answer: High trust makes help warmer and clearer. Low trust still lets play continue, but with distance, fewer gifts, or harder social positioning.
- Example: Hush Trust changes how locals offer food, directions, and emotional buy-in. Custodian Trust changes how candid and tender the reveal feels.
