- Gmscript: Say: "This is the room where Hush decides whether the party belongs for tonight. Offer shoes, food, a game, and one regular by description before name."
- Gmreadaloud: Tea steam, shoe lines, gift shelves, and chipped mugs. A room full of people deciding whether these travelers are guests, trouble, or both.
- Gmchecklist: Offer the shoe line. Use at least one regular. Ask one tavern-building prompt. Let the room react to bramble_outcome if it comes up.
- Gmprivate: Halython's Bramble question is a clean carry-in read; use it only once the table is settled enough for it to matter.
- Playertakeaway: Inside the village, the Co-op is a warm public room of tea steam, shoe lines, gift shelves, chipped mugs, and people deciding whether these travelers are guests, trouble, or both.

- Storytakeaway: The Co-op turns Hush from a destination into people with customs and boundaries.
- Mechanictakeaway: Presence, Prepare/Hope, and table spotlight are enough to make this scene mechanically alive.

Inside the village, the Co-op is a warm public room of tea steam, shoe lines, gift shelves, chipped mugs, and people deciding whether these travelers are guests, trouble, or both. Run the Co-op as a social hub: shoe custom, regulars, games, tavern prompts, and trust-building. Mismatched chairs face inward, shoe lines mark the threshold, and gift shelves hold jars, cloth, ribbons, and careful generosity. Tea pours, mugs knock softly, someone clears their throat before hard news, and a ward chime outside lands a little flat. Clover honey, tea steam, wet boot leather, old wood warmed by bodies, and food stretched with pride instead of abundance. - Gmbeats: MAP-LOC-clover-co-op-custom Custom Shoes on the line Say: "Shoes on the line if you want in as guests." The threshold custom gives players a simple way to show respect. Customs turn Hush into people. Respectful position changes trust. Players know how to enter well. Player takeaway Players know how to enter well. "Shoes on the line if you want in as guests." "The playable fact is: The threshold custom gives players a simple way to show respect." Concrete actions for this beat: talk to a person present, inspect the named detail, help an ally, or choose whether to move toward the Custodian route. presence Story takeaway Customs turn Hush into people. "Shoes on the line if you want in as guests." "The story fact in play is: Customs turn Hush into people." This beat changes Act 3 through this exact pressure: Customs turn Hush into people. presence Mechanic takeaway Respectful position changes trust. "Shoes on the line if you want in as guests." "The active procedure is: Respectful position changes trust." Run intent first, then choose Presence, Instinct, Knowledge, Strength, or Finesse only when the fiction is risky or uncertain. presence MAP-LOC-clover-co-op-regulars Regulars Choose...
- Takeawayhelp: Player takeaway The Co-op gives players concrete social actions. "Hang your shoes, choose a face, play a game, share food, or take a quiet breather." "If someone is stuck, offer one face: the lantern-child, the ale-hauler, or the quiet clank with the fox-bat." This map should make social play easier to run: custom, person, game, food, rest. presence instinct hope table-spotlight Story takeaway The Co-op turns the town into relationships. "This is not the place where you extract directions. This is where you become safe enough to receive them." "Halython can ask about the road attackers here, and the room can hear how the party answers." Use Hush warmth and judgment together. Kindness and boundaries can both be true. presence instinct hope table-spotlight Mechanic takeaway Presence, Hope, and spotlight pacing are the active mechanics. "Presence 12 earns a regular. Instinct 12 reads the room. A quiet Prepare/Hope beat can happen over tea or a game." "Raise hush_trust when players honor customs, listen, or let locals be people." The mechanical payoff is trust, guide access, and possible festival/market boons. presence instinct hope table-spotlight
